'Para sa mga manggagawa': Jolo Revilla makes serious push to end 'endo'

Cavite 1st district Rep. Jolo Revilla wants to put an end once and for all on the decades-long practice of contractualization, more commonly known as "endo".

For this purpose, Revilla filed in the current 20th Congress House Bill (HB) No. 79, or the proposed Security of Tenure Act.

The bill seeks to prohibit labor-only contracting and eliminate end-of-contract or endo schemes that have long stripped workers of the right to regular employment, job security, and long-term benefits.

"We cannot allow this unjust practice to continue. Our workers deserve stable jobs, not five-month cycles of uncertainty. [HB] No. 79 reflects our shared commitment to labor justice and to a future where every Filipino worker can build a dignified life," Revilla said in a recent statement.

"The fight to end endo is a fight for fairness. This is not just a legislative priority—it's a moral obligation. Our labor force has waited long enough," he declared.

Under the measure, all jobs that are necessary and desirable to the employer's usual business must be classified as regular positions.

It sets stricter parameters for legitimate contracting arrangements, prohibits fixed-term employment that c i r c u m v e n t s regularization, and penalizes employers who violate these provisions.

Revilla underscored that the bill does not seek to burden responsible employers, but rather, to curb exploitative practices that have become embedded in the country's labor market.

"This bill is not anti-business. It's pro-worker and pro-growth. By ensuring fair treatment and security for our labor force, we empower them to be more productive, more loyal, and more capable of contributing to the nation's economic development," he explained.

Revilla also pointed out that many workers—particularly in retail, construction, manufacturing, logistics, and service sectors—are forced to accept contractual work out of desperation, often without benefits, protection, or any path to regularization.

"That cycle of fear and instability must end. This bill will give them hope and a fighting chance," he said.

Revilla's mother, Cavite 2nd district Rep. Lani Mercado-Revilla, and his brother, Agimat Party-list Rep. Bryan Revilla co-authored the bill.

Bukid Kabataan Centre in Cavite provides hope and healing to young abuse victims

Manila (AsiaNews) – The Bukid Kabataan Centre (BKC) in Cavite celebrated 25 years. Run by the Sisters of the Good Shepherd (RGS), it serves girls who have survived gender-based violence and street life in the Philippines.

The anniversary was an opportunity to remember the centre's origins and its commitment to empowerment and the rediscovery of self-esteem, through the sharing of life-changing experiences.

Dozens of girls who have been exploited, abused and neglected have found a safe place at the Centre, a refuge where they can heal from the trauma they endured.

The BKC is based on the principles of care, healing, and teaching, and continues to provide comprehensive interventions that restore dignity, self-esteem, and hope to every child.

During their stay at the Centre, the girls are taught essential skills to help them prepare for life outside the facility.

For this reason, they are offered part-time work opportunities on weekends and in the summer; they also earn money by making rosaries and bracelets, which they sell to partner NGOs and visitors to the Centre.

As they move on to the next stage of their lives, the assistance programme ensures they continue to receive care, support, and guidance.

For the event commemorating its half-century, the BKC invited former students to share their life experiences.

"I wanted to be a writer when I grew up," said Joan (not her real name), 14. "Writing about other people's experiences, especially those who have experienced abuse, was something I wanted to do. I wished to inspire other young people who had encountered comparable difficulties and give significance to their stories," she explained.

"At the shelter, I discovered how to lead a contented and tranquil life. Their love taught me to cherish my life," she added. "I have faith that no one will harm or mistreat me. I also gained self-expression and fear management skills. I have clung to God's assurance."

Another 15-year-old girl, Lucy (also a fictitious name), described how her time at the Centre gave her a renewed sense of security, happiness, and optimism for the future. "One of our concerned neighbours escorted my sister and me to the Bukid Kabataan Centre, where we received a warm welcome," she explained.

"We deeply appreciated the opportunity to be here. At the centre, we were able to experience the delight of childhood again. We felt safe and secure because the centre satisfies our basic needs and protects us from danger and worry," she added.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd were founded in France in 1835 by Saint Marie-Euphrasie Pelletier, with the first arriving in the Philippines in 1912.

In Cavite the nuns began their work in 1983, initially as the Morning Glory Programme (MGP) of the Archdiocese of Manila, with the collaboration of Caritas Manila. The congregation then assumed full management of the MGP and BKC in 2000.

A girl can stay for up to three years, although special circumstances may allow exceptions. For those who move on, there is family counselling, educational support, and an after-school care programme.

For programme director Sister Gemma Dinglasan,

RGS, the children go to the gardens that are part of the facility after school and can engage in gardening.

They love watching the seedlings grow and enthusiastically tend the plots under the close supervision of farmworkers. They enjoy harvesting. With this method of education and care, the children learn to be strong and responsible citizens.

ASICS to stage a 10-kilometer race at Vermosa in Imus, Cavite

A race for passionate runners seeking to test their own limits has been recently launched via the ASICS Meta: Time: Trials scheduled Oct. 19 at the Vermosa in Imus, Cavite.

ASICS brand communication executive Diego Verge de Dios said on Tuesday during the Philippine Sportswriters Association Forum that they're staging the 10-kilometer race with a goal of encouraging participants to strive to eclipsing their personal best.

"Our event is a testament to our commitment to see our runners surpass their personal best," said Mr. De Dios, who was accompanied by Sonak brand communication manager Faith So and tech product trainer Rey Maniego.

The top three men and women in the invitational class and the top five in the open section will be given special prizes that ASICS will announce on its social media accounts soon.

This unique race actually made its global debut in Malaga, Spain three years ago and was followed by successful editions in Southeast Asia the same year in Thailand and Malaysia the next year.

Interestingly, national team mainstays Sonny Wagdos excelled last year and Richard Salano, an ASICS endorser, shone bright in Bangkok two years ago. (Joey Villar)
